Abortion Industry Hides Statutory Rape

Abortion clinic operators in Kansas are resisting efforts by the state attorney general to protect underage girls from statutory rape. All state attorney generals should launch abortion clinic investigations.

Kansas Attorney General Phill Kline is seeking the abortion records of underage girls who have had abortions in Kansas in recent years.

Under state law, a girl under the age of 14 who is impregnated is considered to be a victim of child abuse or statutory rape. AG Kline is determined to prosecute the rapists of these girls. In 2003, 78 girls under the age of 14 got abortions in Kansas.

The abortion industry is doing everything in its power to protect the “privacy” of these girls—and of the rapists.

Kline has stated: “There are two things child predators want: access to children and secrecy. I am bound and determined to not give them either.”

Kline says he will keep the names of the girls confidential in his investigation, but is insisting that abortion clinics turn over records of underage girls who are victims of statutory rape. He is determined to prosecute the males who have sexually abused and raped these girls.

Nancy Keenan, head of NARAL Pro-Choice America is outraged by Kline’s effort to prosecute rapists.

She has stated that Kline’s subpoenas “are just one more example of how out of control anti-choice politicians have become under President Bush’s leadership. Americans will and should be appalled at the notion of a state official issuing a mass subpoena for the most private information there is.” (CNSNews. 2/25/2005)

Abortion Industry Hides Rape Of Girls
Mark Crutcher with Life Dynamics, Inc., has exposed the efforts of Planned Parenthood and the National Abortion Federation to conceal the statutory rape of girls from authorities and from parents. Life Dynamics hired several girls to pose as 13-year-olds who had been impregnated by their 21-year-old boy friends. The callers asked if the clinics would report these cases to the authorities and tape recorded the responses. In a majority of the cases, abortion clinic counselors agreed to conceal the rape of these girls by their adult boyfriends.

Planned Parenthood’s Teenwire web site recently featured an article on underage girls dating adults. The feature included a link to “Age of Consent,” a web site run by pedophiles. When the “Age of Consent” link was exposed by a blogger, Teenwire revised the article and removed the pedophile link.

Life Dynamics and Traditional Values Coalition have posted many of these phone conversations on their web sites.

The hiding of statutory rape by abortionists has been going on for years.

Abortion clinics throughout the U.S. must be investigated to prosecute the rapists and sex abusers of underage girls.

In addition, clinic operators who fail to report the rape of girls must be prosecuted for failing to abide by state laws that require the reporting of suspected cases of child abuse.

Crutcher has established a “ChildPredators.com” web site to detail the efforts of abortionists to hide the statutory rape of underage girls.

He notes: “The pregnancy of an underage girl is evidence that she may be the victim of sexual abuse and, therefore, any healthcare worker who has contact with a pregnant underage girl has an obligation to initiate a report to their state’s designated agency. The job of determining whether or not the circumstances that led to this girl’s pregnancy are criminal lies solely with child protective services or the state agency to which the report is mandated.”

Planned Parenthood Teenwire Promotes Adult/Child Sex

Not only are many abortion clinic operators hiding the statutory rape of girls, but Planned Parenthood’s Teenwire web site has actually encouraged girls to access the “Age of Consent” web site operated by pedophiles.

This Teenwire web site recently published an article titled, “Does Age Matter?” by Terry Miller Shannon. The article was dated February 22, 2005.

In Shannon’s article, she notes that many states have laws on statutory rape and recommends teens check out the “Age of Consent” web site for information on laws in each state. The “Age of Consent” web site featured an editorial headlined: “Possession of Child Porn Should Be Legal.”

This pedophile porn site also features a link to sex toy sites as well as what is describes as “Cool Teen Sites.” This site includes links to pornographic webcam sites of teens.

When blogger Dawn Eden exposed Teenwire’s recommendation of Age of Consent to teenagers, the editor of the site removed the original “Does Age Matter?” article and the link to the pedophile web site.

The new “Does Age Matter?” article is authored by Julia Bhatia and doesn’t include the “Age of Consent” link.

However, Eden has posted a screen shot of the original article on her blog at www.dawneden.com.

Teenwire also sends children to a web site called Scarleteen, which is run by Heather Corinna, a radical female homosexual and a man named Malcolm Gin who claims he’s neither male nor female. Scarleteen encourages premarital sex and homosexuality. Corinna claims to be an expert on “erotic spirituality.”

State Attorney Generals Must Launch Investigations Against Abortion Clinics

Kansas AG Phill Kline is a courageous man and other state attorney generals should consult him on their own investigations of how abortion clinics cover up statutory rapes of girls by adults. This crime against girls should no longer be protected by privacy laws. Girls are being raped and sexually abused—and abortion providers are covering up for the sexual predators.
